

Senior Executive Bio

Todd Johnson

Senior Vice President & General Manager,
GetWell Loop

Todd Johnson is a serial entrepreneur committed to building innovative products that engage patients and connect them to their care teams. From great ideas, he builds strong companies on products that address market needs and offer long-term strategic potential.

He joins GetWellNetwork from digital consumer health company HealthLoop, where, as chief executive officer, he led development of a digital platform that bridges communication between providers and patients through automated, daily emails. Under Todd's leadership, HealthLoop deployed into over 70 health systems and hospitals, including LifeBridge Health, Advocate Health Care and UCSF Health. It is also live in hundreds of physicians' practices nationwide.

Todd leads GetWellNetwork's Mountain View, Calif. office and is overseeing integration activities following the company's acquisition of HealthLoop. As a member of the senior leadership team, he is also responsible for helping to guide GetWell Loop™ product development and sales strategy. His consumer digital health expertise is a crucial component of GetWellNetwork's efforts to meet market needs and drive growth in the ambulatory market.

Before HealthLoop, Todd was founding CEO of Baltimore-based Salar, Inc.—an acute care physician charge capture and documentation solution. Working with the nation's leading medical centers and physicians, he grew Salar to a successful acquisition in 2011.

Todd holds a bachelor's of administration in computer science from Cornell University.
